A photograph of two dolphins swimming in clear, turquoise water. One dolphin is in the foreground, angled towards the left, while the other is slightly behind and to the right. Their bodies are sleek and dark, contrasting with the bright blue water. The lighting is natural, creating a serene and clear underwater scene.

What Goes Around Comes Around - and Around - and

We see many things run in three times. First we salvage a still useful thing from the Berkeley dump, or we scoop it from someone who doesn't want it and bring it to us, or we pick it up from someone who calls. We sell it to someone else who can use it. That's ours. It proves true. That's our work.

If the buyer also lets go of it, we're here to take it again if it's still useful.

Resources are conserved. The energy and skill that went into manufacturing are respected. People can discard unwanted stuff without wasting. We make a living. Shoppers get a good deal. And so too! Courtesy

Figure 1: Schematic representation of the experimental design. The figure shows a sequence of events: a subject is presented with a stimulus (a word), then a response is given (a word), and finally a feedback is provided (a word). The sequence is repeated for multiple trials. The feedback is either 'Correct' or 'Incorrect'. The 'Correct' feedback leads to the next trial, while the 'Incorrect' feedback leads to a 'Correct' feedback, which then leads to the next trial. The sequence is repeated for multiple trials.
